

The Sundog Tournament Series

What's Good About Having it at Your Disc Golf Course?

What it is: The Sundog Tournament Series (STS) is a singles-format, tournament-style, Tuesday evening disc golf league that rotates between 15 of the Twin Cities metro area's disc golf courses. The STS features various levels of competition with two professional and four amateur divisions, and weekly registration is open to anyone at any time during its summer-long season. In compliance with the insurance regulations of most course operators:

- STS carries full liability insurance, and all course operators are "Additional Insureds".

How STS league play can benefit your course: Disc golf is a game that demands high standards of rules, etiquette, and courtesy. Among the basic elements of these standards are concern for spectators and safety, and respect for plants and wildlife on the course. The STS has strict rules in place regarding vandalism, littering, and bad or illegal behavior. Most STS league players are etiquette-savvy, familiar with organized competitions, and possess a strong self-policing ethic. Some things you can be sure of when the Sundog Tournament Series is at your course:

- STS players do not litter; in fact, many will clean up the course as they play, and educate others about keeping courses and parks clean. STS policies regarding trash include no glass anywhere in the park, and "pack it in, pack it out".
- STS players police and report course vandalism, a concern for all disc golf course operators.
- STS players monitor and report bad or illegal behavior, on the course and in parking areas.
- STS league play reduces serious crime in your park through increased traffic.

How STS league play can benefit your community: The growing popularity of disc golf begins with the essential fact that throwing a flying disc with power and accuracy is a marvelous sensation. The constant challenge, the social nature of the game, and good physical and mental conditioning are just some of the factors that can make disc golf a beneficial game for everyone, regardless of age, gender, or ability. Other ways the Sundog Tournament Series can benefit your community are:

- With a weekly average over 130 players - many of them using local services - the STS can have a real impact on local small business economies.
- League play teaches disc golfers to be better stewards of the game and the courses upon which it is played.
- STS league provides a way for the uninitiated disc golfer at his or her home course to see or try "entry level" tournament disc golf.
- STS league brings people from all over the Twin Cities region and beyond to your course, many of whom will return again and again to enjoy what your area has to offer.
- Every year, more STS league players become local disc club members and volunteers, run charity events and fundraisers, work with their local schools and at-risk kids, get involved with their cities and parks, etc. Many STS players have risen to become top-ranked competitors representing Minnesota world-wide, including two world champions.
